NAN PATTERSON JURY DISAGREES AND IS DISCHARGED

Accused Woman Breaks Down and Weeps Violently When She Hears the Report From the Jury, Which Was Out
Twenty-four Hours.

TAKEN BACK TO
THE TOMBS AGAIN

Where the Accused Slayer of "Caesar" Young Will Pass
a Cheerless Christmas--- Reported the Jury Stood
6 to 6 For Acquittal.

New York, Dec. 23.—After weighing Nan Patterson's case in the balance for 24 hours—from yesterday noon to this afternoon—the jury at 12:54 this afternoon reported a final disagreement and was discharged by Justice Davis.

Miss Patterson, who was charged with the murder of "Caesar" Young, a prominent sporting man, collapsed completely when announcement was made of the disagreement and sobbed convulsively on her father's shoulder.

On motion of Prosecutor Rand the prisoner was remanded without bail. It is expected, although no announcement has yet been made, that the young actress will have to undergo another trial. Foreman Hernad told the court that the possibility of reaching an agreement was absolutely gone. He said: "We have gone all over the evidence upon every possible point and have argued the case thoroughly. There are some members of the jury who are absolutely not open to conviction or argument. The possibility of reaching a verdict is very remote indeed."

Miss Patterson was on the verge of collapse several times during her few minutes in court. Her face was deathly pale.

It was regarded, about the court, that the case would probably go to trial again, as the foreman's remarks indicated a hopeless deadlock of the jury.

How the Jury Stood.

Foreman Harner says the jury took one ballot up to last night which stood six for conviction and six for acquittal. He declined to give further information as to the deliberations of the jury.

The jury had a hard night of it. They wrangled until nearly three o'clock this morning, when the lights were put out and they tried to get some sleep. There were no coats or blankets in the jury room and the men had to stretch out on chairs. At seven o'clock they were taken to breakfast.

At 11:30 this forenoon Deputy Sheriff Dan Kelley was sent to the jury room to bring the jury into court. They announced that they had not as yet agreed, and were sent back to the jury room.

Miss Patterson's Long Wait.

Miss Patterson after the jury retired, spent the afternoon and evening between her cell in "The Tombs" and what is known as the "pen" on the third floor of the court building.

Most of the afternoon was spent in "The Tombs." As she was led from the court room after the jury retired she witnessed a marriage ceremony between two prisoners, and congratulated them. For a moment her face brightened as though she had forgotten her own troubles, but soon after resumed its look of sad calm. While she was in "The Tombs" she opened numerous telegrams and letters from friends and relatives congratulating her upon her defense and expressing the hope and wish that her freedom was near at hand. One of the messages was from her mother, who has not been able to attend the trial. It said she hoped to have her daughter home for Christmas.

Last evening after her dinner she was taken to the "pen" where she was joined by her father, who has been constant in his support of his daughter since she was first accused of the crime and who has been her faithful companion every day in court. No one else saw Miss Patterson during the evening and the fact that she was taken from the jail to the court indicated that she still expected a verdict, notwithstanding that the jury had consumed hours in discussion without reaching a finding.

The sliding faith of the young woman was shown shortly after six o'clock last night, when she expressed the opinion that the jury would acquit her, saying:

"I almost feel sure that I will leave tonight, for the jury, I think, will stay out all night." When she said this her face was tense with nervousness and in her hand was the misadvice she had just received from her father.

"Dear Nannie, we look for you to-morrow because father sent word that the jury would set you free and send you to me tonight. I dreamed last night that you were with us again and that was Christmas day. God grant that the dream comes true, Nannie, and that I will soon have my little girl again." The jury was kept locked up for the night, at half past eleven o'clock having announced that it had failed to reach a verdict. When the news was broken to Miss Patterson in the "pen" that the jury would have to be locked up for the night, she nearly collapsed. She had expected an early verdict.

As soon as the jury was locked up for the night, Miss Patterson bade her father a tearful farewell and was escorted to her cell in "The Tombs." The girl who showed such courage through the long trial was almost a nervous wreck. The great strength she formerly evinced failed and she repeatedly exclaimed, "Oh, how can those men doubt my word?"

Immediately after the announcement that the jury was locked up for the night officers cleared the corridors of the court building of scores of newspaper men and attorneys who had anxiously awaited news from the jury. Murmurs of disappointment were heard from the crowd, which seemed convinced that the jury would never reach a verdict. At 10 o'clock the crowd of morbidly interested persons about the court house gathered on the White street side of the building where they could see the little room in which the jury was sitting. This room is on the second floor of the structure, and though the curtains were drawn, any movement made inside was plainly silhouetted.

Half of those gathered were women, and for a long time they were quiet. Finally, however, becoming impatient, various cries were set up, directed at the juryman, and this was continued for a long time.

Disappointed crowds in the street heard of the locking up of the jury for the night and joined in the wail of the persons who had been privileged to stand in the court building during the deliberations of the jurors. A few women were in the crowd which stood in White street and watched the windows of the jury room until the announcement came that the twelve men must spend the night in deliberation.

As the hours dragged on and no report came from the jury room the crowd in the building and in the street became impatient. At one time a small company of the men in the corridors broke into song. Miss Patterson heard this sign of merriment and her nerves are said to have rebelled at the indication that any one could be gay when a question of such moment was under consideration.

DIRECTORS HIT BACK

Managers of State Institutions
Recently Investigated

CHARGE UNFAIRNESS

Evidently Intend to Hold Their Positions, as They Organized at Rutland Yesterday Afternoon for the Term.

Rutland, Dec. 23.—The board of directors of the state's prison and house of correction, consisting of John N. Woodin of this city, A. E. Cudworth of South Londonderry and Judge P. M. Pier of Jamaica, the newly appointed member who succeeds Marsh O. Perkins of Windsor, met at the house of correction yesterday afternoon and organized as follows: Chairman, John N. Woodin, secretary, A. E. Cudworth. The new member was taken through the institution yesterday.

Mr. Woodin and Mr. Cudworth have written an open letter to Gov. C. J. Bell, in which they answer the charge and insinuations made in the report of the legislative investigations committee. In the letter, which is of great length, the directors charge unfairness on the part of the committee. They claim that a casual reading of the report leaves the impression that gross irregularities have existed in the management of the state's prison and the house of correction for years and that one is inevitably led to the conclusion that hardly an honest man during that period has been connected with either institution.

The directors say that a closer analysis of the report, however, does not show facts which sustain the committee. Such analysis, on the contrary, showed that there was very little in the report except insinuations and clever use of language which deceives rather than enlightens the reader. A report which made such harsh recommendations as the report in question should be clear, definite and precise as to facts found.

Each charge and insinuation in the committee's report is answered by the directors, who uphold the prison officials and claim that both institutions have been managed in a business-like manner. In conclusion they say: "We are willing to stand on the record which has been made and to be judged by the results accomplished."
